LOCAL AND PERSONAL.

DODGE CITY, SATURDAY, JUNE 8, '78

Jack Callahan and George Pease, formerly of Dodge, are both employed in the corral at Fort Elliott.

"Uncle Fooker" is still at Andrew Johnson's blacksmith shop, ready to wait upon the most fastidious customer.

Sally Culbertson arrived home last Monday from a successful freighting trip to Fort Elliott. He loaded up and started out again Thursday.

"Bona," associate editor of the Pueblo Chieftain, wrote up some very interesting accounts of his visit to Dodge City, which were published in the Chieftain.

M. M. Lewis, editor Kinsley Graphic, is going to Put-in-Bay with the other editors. Some of the editors will be put in bay before they return home.

John Camp, one of the most widely known cattle men in Texas, arrived by rail last Monday, a few days ahead of his cattle. He will remain in Dodge during the season.

There is a paper published in Emporia styled Hatchet, published by a man named Stubbs. What Stubbs can do with a Hatchet is what a hatchet can do with stubs. What does the Emporia News say?

The Hays City Sentinel acknowledges that hell is over there. We judge so by reading the Hays City papers. We hope our friend Colborn won't be contaminated in that modern journalism peculiar to a Hays City.

BORN—To Mr. and Mrs. Julius Sleeter, on the 2d day of June, 1878, a son.
Good for Julius! We hope Julius No. 2 may thrive and prosper, and never give his sage parent occasion to regret forming his acquaintance.

The young man of whom we mentioned last week as being a high kicker has come to grief. Elated with former victories he placed himself on the turf, ejaculating, "I am a wolf," or words of like import, and added that Sunday night was his night to howl. He met a stranger. He immediately tackled the stranger. The stranger "took him in." Our vaqueroed hero now welters in his gore. His head is worn in a gunny sack, and he is living in retirement for the time being.

THE "WICKED CITY."

Newspaper correspondents are apt to give the worst phase of social life in Dodge City, but Bona in the Pueblo Chieftain, does not make an overdrawn picture. We make a few extracts on things generally:

Dodge City contains about one thousand regular inhabitants, but during the cattle season it swells to several times that number of people, which of course makes it good for hotels, restaurants, saloons and other caterers to the wants of the cow boys and cow owners.

The average Texas cow man gambles, and to supply this want almost, if not every saloon in the city, has one or more gambling tables. Faro, monte, and the other usual games are dealt openly, and most of the saloons have a private room for the votaries of draw poker.

Three dance houses are in full blast and appear to be making money. The cow boy is apt to spend his money liberally when he gets paid off after his long drive from Texas, and the pimps, gamblers and prostitutes who spend the winter in Kansas City and other large towns, generally manage to get to the point where the boys are paid off so as to give them a good chance to invest their money in fun. The people who own Dodge City and live there do not look with favor on the advent of these classes, and only tolerate them because they cannot well help themselves. They follow the annual cattle drive like vultures follow an army, and disappear at the end of the cattle driving and shipping season. It is this feature of the business that make people averse to the Texas cattle business coming to their towns, and Dodge has already a strong element opposed to cattle coming there to be shipped.

Dodge City is the county seat of Ford county, and has an excellent two story brick court house, a first rate graded school a Union church, two newspapers, and all the appliances of religion and civilization found in other towns of its size in Kansas. Extremes meet here, and Dodge can show some of the best as well as some of the worst elements of frontier life.

There are but few eastern cattle buyers here as yet, but several of the owners of small herds have sold out to the owners of large bunches. The prices realized are about as follows: Two year old steers $12, cows $15, two year old heifers $11, yearlings $8, three year old steers $17, and four year olds $19.

It was formerly supposed that the country in this vicinity was of no account as an agricultural country, but the successful growing of heavy crops for several years past has dispelled this illusion, and it will not be many years till the "dead line" for the Texas cattle business will be removed a long ways west of Dodge City, for the farmers and long horns never can get along peaceably together. The business will in all probability go to West Las Animas if it ever leaves Dodge City.

The rank growth of grain and vegetables in this vicinity proves that the soil of the Arkansas valley is fertile from the mountains to the Mississippi. There has been plenty of rain for several years past to make crops in this vicinity.

DENTISTRY.

J. H. Holliday, Dentist, very respectfully offers his professional services to the citizens of Dodge City and surrounding country during the summer. Office at room No. 24, Dodge House. Where satisfaction is not given money will be refunded.

Mr. R. P. Edwards, boss herder for Henry Stevens, came up from the Canadian this week, where he has been holding cattle during the winter. He started for Paduaro on Wednesday to bring up about 800 calves that have been sold by Mr. Stevens.

Bona, in his Dodge City account to the Pueblo Chieftain pays us this compliment:

The Dodge City TIMES is one of the old stand by institutions that has helped build up the town, and its proprietors Messrs. Shinn & Klaine deserve well of the people of Kansas. They have a good job office and their paper is a credit to the town and Ford county.

Last Saturday the Pueblo Chieftain celebrated its ten wedding. It says: Ten years ago to-day the first number of the Chieftain, the pioneer newspaper of Southern Colorado, made its appearance. At that time no newspaper existed in Colorado south of Denver, and the whole of the rich grazing, mining and agricultural region lying south of the divide was an unknown country inhabited, according to the newspapers of the north, by greasers, horse thieves and scoundrels generally.

The "wicked City of Dodge" can at last boast of a Christian organization—a Presbyterian Church. It was organized last Sunday week. We would have mentioned the matter last week but we thought it best to break the news gently to the outside world. The tender bud of Christianity is only just beginning to sprout; but as "tall oaks from little acorns grow," so this infant, under the guide and care of Brother Wright, may grow and spread its foliage like the mighty oak of the forest. Years ago John the Baptist preached in the wilderness of Judea, and his meat was locusts and wild honey, but he baptized many converts in the river of Jordan. Who can tell but that years hence another Luke may write a book about our minister preaching in the wilderness of Dodge City and baptizing in the river Arkansas?

COMMODORE FURLING.

In common with other great "Stiffs," Commodore Furling is sensitive of his proper title. Last week we styled him "Colonel" Furling. It should have read Commodore Furling. He served in the navy and was with Farragut's flotilla at New Orleans, and was general reester during the siege. The Commodore is not in love with Kansas. Life is hard to sustain here. There are too many hard knocks required to meet whisky and brand bills. He proposes to go to the Sandwich Islands and invest himself with King "Calico's" authority, that potentate being a particular friend of Furling's. If not furnished transportation he will beat his way to the Canals. In that sunny, lazy atmosphere, under a broad tree, and in the lascivious embraces of the voluptuous Cannibal maiden, Furling can revel in the delight of his passion.
